Mr. J. C. Ainsley is expected to arrive in New York today on his return from a business trip to England. Mr. Ainsley will probably reach here the latter part of next week. The work of putting in new machinery and getting everything ready for the coming season is being rushed at the Ainsley Cannery.

After the lunch a short program was given, the Misses Collins, Copeland and Wade taking the house by storm with a unique "old maid song". The Keesling trio rendered a musical treat and Mrs. Sutter's recitation was greatly appreciated.

Junior Farce

A BIG SUCCESS—OTHER HIGH SCHOOL DOINGS

The Junior Class of the Campbell Union High School covered itself with glory Friday evening and again Monday evening when they so successfully put on "At the End of the Rainbow." The assembly hall of the High School was packed Friday night and the students consented to play again Monday night for the benefit of others who wished to attend.

The Campbell Orchestra gave several selections which were thoroughly appreciated by the assembly. The orchestra would be a credit to a much larger town than this, and their music to much older players.

The play, which was located in a college town and in the present time, was prettily staged, and the costuming was particularly effective, for an amateur performance.

One plot of the play is very similar to that of "The College Widow" where the young lady is persuaded to induce the football hero to join the ranks of her college. This, and another minor issue, in which a candidate for a sorority and one for a fraternity, are unintentionally placed in the same house as maid and butler, are hinged upon the major plot, in which the inheritance of property by Douglas Brown or his stepmother and her daughter, is involved.

The curtain rose on a "Den" in the Theta Phi House where Phillis Lane was vainly endeavoring to get together material for the "Oriole." One of the girls suggested using some of the favorite quotations of the faculty.

The participants are all worthy of special mention but their number rather precludes the possibility of that, however, a few words about the more prominent characters are in order.

Freeman Duncan, as Robert Preston, a lawyer, and guardian of Marian Dayton, very successfully carried out his part and the few gray hairs of middle age proved quite becoming.

Douglas Brown, the football lion, was good and only needed the regulation hair to be a veritable hero.

Dick and Nellie Preston, the bride and groom, were both very good, and the groom really "looked the part."

Dan Yeager was quite at home, as though he had "trod the boards" from his youth up and carried himself with a nonchalant that was very taking.

Vaudine Putnam, as Marian Dayton, probably had the hardest role for an amateur to carry out successfully, but she exhibited decided dramatic talent.

Lelia Granstrom took the unpleasant part of a young adventuress very well indeed, and Amy Farley as Phillis Lane, the leader of her coterie, very well deserved her popularity. No wonder Douglas succumbed so readily.

The Imp, a Freshman. She was "gir" and saying anything more would be superfluous.

Margaret Hinchliffe, as the candidate for Theta Phi, was a very dainty and piquant young miss, and was quite as much at home in her part as was young Lochinvar in his.

Following is the complete cast of characters, exclusive of several "mere men", designated by Shakespeare as "The Rabble", who belonged to the first and participated in the football scene:

The plays netted $60.00 which goes into the piano fund.

By the assistance of the two healthy umpires, Mountain View was able to defeat Campbell by a score of 10 to 8. Not so bad considering the fact that the locals were somewhat crippled by the loss of some of their players, and failed to connect with the ball at opportune times.

Saturday Chas. Goodridge lost the tennis singles to Schulz of Morgan Hill, 6-2, 6-4, 6-0 and during the previous week the doubles were lost to Los Gatos 7-5, 1-6 and 6-2.

A series of ladies' singles and doubles at the local courts was won by the local players against Los Gatos yesterday. Miss Pendleton won the singles by taking two sets out of three, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5; and with Miss Beaver won the doubles 6-3, 6-3. Who's next?

Floral Display

The Floral Fete of the Santa Clara Co. Fair held last week on the grounds of the Vendome in San Jose was remarkably successful for a first attempt, as the work was new to all and many who might have made exhibits did not appreciate the value of the opportunity.

The displays were especially interesting to us, we being so new to the state, but the great variety of the exhibits was a matter of comment among native Californians.

The school children in different parts of the county had made splendid collections of various kinds; flowers, ferns, reeds and grasses, and pressed plants. One very interesting group was the samples of woods, both in the raw and finished states.

Among the exhibits most worthy of mention was the rose display made by the Country Woman's Club of Campbell, not only for the great variety, some 85 or more in number, but as being the only club exhibit.

Campbell and vicinity should feel much elated over the enterprise of this club, which brot us so prominently before the county and the many foreign visitors, by capturing the First Prize for the best exhibit of cut flowers. The prize was a fine gavel, mounted with silver, which will hereafter reduce the club to order, when, as the men caustically remark, "they all try to talk at once."

The account of the meeting at which the gavel was presented will appear in next issue.

Entertained for Miss Price

Miss Helen Price, who visited Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Kennedy from Friday until Monday, was the guest of honor at a rose luncheon given by Mrs. Kennedy on Saturday. The dining room was a bower of roses and pink crepe paper, the color scheme of pink being carried out in the almond holders and handpainted place cards. A five course luncheon was served to the following guests: Misses Price, Burleigh, Kennedy, Palmer, Farley and Mrs. Palmer.

In the evening, Miss Price was honor guest at a party by Miss Mamie Burleigh and Mrs. Kennedy at the former lady's home in San Jose. The guests were members of the class of 1910 of the C. U. H. S. and a few friends.

The decorations were all in the class colors, red and gold, and huge bowls of California poppies, their class flower. The refreshments, prizes, and contest were all in the color scheme.

Several of the guests favored the company with solos and Miss Price gave several readings.

Chamberlin Leaves The Press

A. E. Chamberlin, who has been connected with the Press for almost the past year, has severed that connection, as he deemed it best for him to work outside for awhile. He says he has been kept inside too much with this work and will for a time at least, work on a fruit ranch.

Wednesday Mr. Chamberlin went to work for a few days with a wholesale house in San Jose, but that evening he came home with a badly sprained ankle which will incapacitate him for work for several days.

During our brief acquaintance with Mr. Chamberlin in shop life we are pleased to say we have found in him a good fellow and friend, and should he ever be "up against it" he can just drop into the Press office and get a job any old time. We wish him success in whatever line of work or business he adopts.

Pomona Grange meets at Campbell, Saturday, May 18, beginning at 10 a. m. and lasting the rest of the day. Dinner will be served at the Coffee Club. Considerable rivalry is expected between the various local granges in the floral exhibit which will be a new feature of the Pomona Grange. Beside the adopted flower of each grange, all other flowers will be shown. Along this line, if this show proves popular, displays of vegetables and fruits will be held later and in seasons when such products are at their best.

ONE ROOM HIS PRISON

PENITENT YOUTH SHUNNED
WORLD TO EXPIATE A FAULT.

For 34 Years Residents of Clyde, N. Y., Watched Closed Window, But It Never Opened Until Its Occupant Was Dead.

Clyde, N. Y.—Thirty-four years of penance for grief he caused his father ended the other day, by the death of J. Arthur Hamilton. For more than a quarter of a century the blinds in his room were drawn on rusty hinges and sunlight never flooded the apartment. From small cracks between the shutters he saw generations grow and pass away, but the mystery of his sudden disappearance was not solved until it was learned that Hamilton's body filled a newly-made grave. His old friends believed he had gone west on a mining venture and many had forgotten him.

Clyde saw the last of Arthur Hamilton 34 years ago. He disappeared in a night. His absence was the more noticeable because, up to the time he disappeared, Clyde had seen so much of him. He was the most active of the society and business men of the town, handsome in appearance and intellectual. His father, a devout member of the church and a banker, was disappointed in his son because he failed to keep pledges to reform and cease his skylarking.

One night he went to Lyons, became involved with the authorities and the father was called to go his bail. The blow preyed on the father's mind. He became ill and died. Young Hamilton blamed himself for his father's death and determined to do penance by spending the remainder of his days in solitary confinement.

Hamilton lived solely with his books, his memories and his pipe. It now becomes known that he sat daily at his windows and watched the people of Clyde as they came and went past his self-made prison. He saw his old friends grow to maturity, marry and rear children. The tolling of church bells informed him of deaths, and he would miss another familiar face on the street.

His face changed. His hair whitened. He shambled in his gait like an old man. Then he began to leave his room by night and walk about the Hamilton mansion, but none ever connected him with the Arthur Hamilton of years before. Finally he needed the attention of a physician. One was sworn to secrecy and the old man taken to a hospital, but he died.

RIDES TURTLE TO SHORE

Palm Beach, Fla.—John Jordan of Buffalo, a guest of William J. (Fingy) Connors, his brother-in-law, was attacked while bathing by one of the largest turtles ever seen here, and for fifteen minutes, while he tried to defend himself, was threatened with bodily injury and perhaps death by drowning. He escaped with bites on the arms and legs.

Mr. Jordan entered the water alone in front of the Connors' cottage and was swimming 200 feet from shore when the turtle rose under him, striking at him with its head. To save himself Mr. Jordan jumped on its back.

The turtle swam for deep water and dove, unseating its rider. Coming to the surface, it again struck at him viciously. Unable to swim away, Jordan again climbed to the turtle's back and using his feet as a rudder and holding to the flippers he steered it toward shore.

Meantime Miss Alice Connors summoned two Japanese servants, who rushed out with a clothes line, forming a noose, which they got over the turtle's head after a struggle in which both were bitten.

The turtle measured five and a half feet in diameter.

Imposes Fine and Pays It.

Chicago.—In carrying out the strict letter of the law, Municipal Judge John J. Rooney, sitting at the Thirty-fifth street court the other day, imposed a fine of $1 on Patrick Conroy, who had been charged with stealing six lamb chops to feed his starving family.

The next moment the judge reached down in his pocket and, pulling out money enough to cover the fine, handed it to his court clerk and ordered the latter to mark the fine paid.

Conroy thanked the judge to whom his story had been told. He said he had been out of work for several months, and several days ago, when he obtained a position with a company he stole the meat to feed his wife and seven children, who had not tasted meat for a long time.

To Have Woman Police Court.

San Francisco.—A police court exclusively for women is planned for this city. The purpose will be to protect female prisoners and witnesses from crowds that throng the ordinary police courts. Only women offenders will be tried except in cases in which women are called as witnesses. It is planned to have a woman bailiff in attendance. The police judges will take turns in presiding.

DID HIS WORK THOROUGHLY

To make an accurate description of the route taken through an unknown country requires an amount of hard and incessant labor of which few persons have any conception. An instance in point may be taken from the explorations of William Junker in Central Africa.

This man, a Russian by birth, spent five years endeavoring to trace the course of the River Welle, which lies between the headwaters of the Nile and the Congo, with a view to determine the position of the watershed between the two rivers.

When actually on the march he wore a coat designed by himself, having numerous large and small pockets especially arranged for the handy use of his watch, compass, aneroid, thermometer and note books. From one of its buttons hung three pencils; one red for marking his route, another blue for noting the rivers and streams, the third black for recording the times of starting and halting, together with all the more notable incidents of the day's march.

In a little notebook, ruled for the purpose, the exact time of starting was put down, thereafter, at the end of every five minutes the direction in which he was proceeding was determined by a glance at the compass and carefully noted, while occasionally the readings of the aneroid and the thermometer were taken.

A brook crosses the path. With the blue pencil it is instantly designated, as well as the direction of its current and its estimated breadth and depth. Every change in the character of the country is entered, as from wooded to grass lands, or from desert to fertile soil. The prominent objects encountered on the way, with their apparent height and distance, are all indicated. So also are the names of the tribes, and any local information that may have been obtained.

The time and duration of every halt is carefully kept, as it is necessary to know the actual marching time in order to calculate the distance gone. Doctor Junker's uniform rate was a little over three miles an hour.

When the night camp was reached the first duty of the explorer, after supper, was to copy all the notes made during the day into a large book; one page generally, though sometimes two, being used to record a day's march. If the night were clear the traveler's work would end with an observation for determining the position of the camp. This done, he felt that he had earned his right to rest.

In this manner Junker traveled on foot 4,000 miles through a country a large part of which had never before been visited by a white man.—Harper's Weekly.

Found Bones of Soldiers.

During the recent excavations in the historic ground of Abbey lane Athlone, Ireland, for the commonplace purpose of constructing a sewer, some remarkable finds were made by the excavating party. Not far beneath the soil they came in contact with a large quantity of human remains. There were no symptoms of coffins, but several skulls and bones were thrown up. Evidences of a very substantial foundation which were also unearthed, four feet under the surface and the human remains buried apparently in a trench in the immediate vicinity, gave rise to the supposition that the skeletons were those of the Irish soldiers who fought in the sieges near the famous old bridge of Athlone. The Abbey was founded by Cistercian monks the same year that the site of the castle was taken over by King John, with other lands adjoining which belonged to the monks; and in exchange the king gave to the monastery the lands known today as Monksland, on the borders of the town. A holy water fount was also unearthed.

Hogs Loose and on Rampage.

The sleeping citizens on a certain street in Rochester, N. Y., were awakened the other morning before daylight by an unusual noise. What the awakened people saw was a strange sight when they shivered their ways to the windows and looked into the street. The roadway was filled with a drove of hogs, whose grunting and squealings had joined to cause the disturbance. A short time before they had been snugly packed in live stock cars on the railroad. But there had been a wreck and thousands of hogs were released from their prisons. They invaded the town and started immediately on the chief business of their existence, the acquirement and disposal of food. Some householders sought the morning paper only to find a disconsolate hog sitting on the doorstep, but many others were startled from time to time by noisy visits to the garbage pails in the alley. And the garbage collectors' wagons were the leaders of processions. It was well into the day before the swine had been rounded up and again put into strong captivity.

Here Is a Real Wit.

The town council held a big banquet. One of the councillors came arrayed in a tartan waistcoat. He was subjected to a great number of curious looks. At length one of his brother councillors, unable to restrain his curiosity, remarked:

"I say, what possessed you to come in a tartan waistcoat?"

"Well," came the witty answer, "I'm not like some of you. Always when I dine I like to keep a check over my stomach."

DIGGING UP OLD EPHEBUS

REMAINS OF THE CENTRAL PART

STEAM ENGINE AND OTHERS AT WORK

EVERYONE who cares at all about classical antiquity is glad to hear that the Austrian Archaeological Institute is resuming its exploration of the city of the great Diana. It is, fortunately, rare for politics to interfere with science, but at Ephesus (as recently at Cyrene) the exception occurred. The right under which the Austrians began work in 1899 was based on a personal permission from Sultan Abdul Hamid; and with the new order, which was established in 1908, it not only lapsed, but could not be renewed in its terms consistently with the Constitution. Almost immediately followed the annexation of Bosnia. The difficulties of Austrian would-be concessionaries in the Ottoman empire were redoubled; the institute had to shut up its house in Ayasuluk, stack its rails and cars, and leave the scene of ten seasons' operations to be reoccupied by the rank vegetation which a marshy site on the hot west coast of Anatolia is only too ready to send up, writes D. G. Hogarth, in Illustrated London News. I walked over the field of ruin in the autumn of 1910, and found it fast becoming a thicket of reeds and brushwood; but what it must have looked like last spring, after the heavy snows and rains of the severest winter ever known in the Levant, I can only guess.

Four years ago the site gave me the best idea that I have ever been able to get of the splendid appearance which a great Graeco-Roman city, built in a land of marble, must have made. True that even here the imagination had a great deal to do. Hardly any building except the theater had more than a course or two of its external walls, or more than a foot or two of its column-shafts standing. The least-destroyed structure, the Library of Celsus, is not preserved above the height of a man; the larger agora was still unexcavated of the deposit of ages, and the streets were littered with chaotic ruin. But still there ran the paved streets, plain to see; there were the monuments which had lined them, in their original places, or as near as might be; there were the market-places, and here, there, and everywhere, the gate-posts, lintels, architraves and columns which had made the splendor of the facades. It seemed that no building in this quarter of Ephesus had not been fronted with marble and carved richly. Truly this had been no mean city!

How Germans Excavate.

German excavators are very fond of such a superficial clearance of an ancient site, and, with that object the authorities usually place an architect at the head of their expeditions. There is much to be said for their policy. The evidence for one period of antiquity is made visible as a whole and on the spot; and the German diggers, having more to show the visitor than another digger has who burrows to the bottom of all things, removing what lies above as soon as he has recorded it, probably educate more people in archaeology (so far as a tourist spending two or three hours on a site can pick up archaeology) than any other. The lesson of a cleared site is so obvious and so easily read. The other kind of digger, whose results are hardly to be seen and appreciated until they appear in the cases of some distant museum, appeals only to those who already know much of antiquity, and have studied elsewhere the lesson which he does but illustrate.

When I dug at Ephesus myself for the British museum some years ago (though not in the city area), I made for the bottom of things at once, regardless of overlying things, once these had been recorded. That I did so, however, is neither to my credit nor to my discredit, for really I had no choice, if I was to get any results worth mentioning. I was commissioned to dig once more, and for the last time (in all likelihood) into the noisome pit which Wood had made thirty-five years before in order to get down to the site of the temple of Ephesian Artemis. What little the Byzantine builders of churches and the moslem builders of mosques had left of the great shrine, as it had been in Roman and Hellenistic times, he carried almost entirely away. Below that stratum something had survived of the earlier temple which Croesus helped to build. Of this also Wood removed all except some patches of pavement, drums of columns, and bits of walling and foundations. Unless there were still earlier temples below this—and below, as it happened, the spring water-level to boot—I had nothing to do but put the place tidy, make as accurate a plan as possible of the meager vestiges, and come away. Therefore, my one chance was to probe below Wood's lowest. I procured a big steam engine and pump, probed, and found there were remains of not less than three shrines below. Each had been smaller than its successor, but all were built round the same central point which the greater temples above them used. That point was marked by a square basis of ashlar masonry which had four times been restored, enlarged and heightened; but through all its changes it had supported the cult-statue of the great goddess, looking seawards down the ever-lengthening naves of her successive shrines.

Probes Rich Shrine.

And I had such further reward as a digger may always hope for if he probes to the bottom of a site once occupied by a very rich shrine. The floor of the earliest shrine of all was found to be littered with remains of offerings in ivory, gold, silver, bronze, terra cotta and other materials; and the rubble core of the earliest pedestal was sown with yet more of these things—mostly gauds of pious women who had thrown them in when the square basis was first being built. Those which I found on the floor outside had, no doubt, been trampled into the slime when the earliest shrine was sacked or otherwise ruined, and they had been left for me because their existence had been forgotten. Those within the basis may have been remembered, when it came to be restored; but superstitious piety respected the structure into whose core they had passed until all memory of them, too, faded away. So I got them as well—nearly two thousand of them! They have proved of much more worth than mere loot; for they have told us what early Ionian art could produce—have told us, in fact, just what the Austrian excavations in the city have failed to tell.

I left the site of the Artemisium to become a morass again, and even a worse one than of old, for the deep digging had tapped fresh springs. There was no help for it, nor is there any hope of fresh discoveries there in time to come. The site of the greatest of ancient shrines must remain a pool in winter and a fever-breeding hole in summer. All our hope for new light on Ephesus rests on the continuation of the Austrian excavation in the city. May it go deeper as it goes farther!

Ambition of Big-Game Hunters.

India has produced some of the finest big-game hunters in the world. First they kill deer, then tigers, and after that they climb into the hills after the mountain sheep, which are the most difficult of all their kind to follow and kill. But there is one ambition beyond the mountain sheep. That is the snow leopard. This beautiful creature, white as the snows it lives among, is rarely found below a height of 11,000 feet, and is even there extremely rare. It is both wild and savage, and the natives have a superstitious fear of its white coat and deep-green eyes. The man who succeeds in killing a snow leopard steps into the very first rank of big-game hunters.

WHO WHO-why

HELEN GOULD TO THE RESCUE

Miss Helen Gould, philanthropist, one of the best loved among American women and possessor of millions, has come forward to save the family fortunes from possible wreckage and to restore the prestige of the family name.

At the very moment when the financial downfall of the family is impending she has offered to cast her personal fortune into the breach to stay the threatened calamity.

In so doing she has chosen to forget and to forgive all that has occurred to alienate one member of the family from the others. She is inspired by her own bounty of heart and by the deep reverence in which she holds her father's memory.

Miss Gould left New York the other day in her private car for San Francisco, for it is there that the arrangements will be made by which the family finances will be straightened out. She is going to look over things for herself, and is accompanied by some prominent financiers.

She will see and study for the first time the great Gould properties that have their center in San Francisco. With her are a number of eastern financiers and railroad men, with whom she will advise.

Until now Miss Gould has remained free of the financial enterprises in which her family has been involved. Her chief concern has been her philanthropic work.

HEAD OF VERY SMARTEST SET

Sadness and gloom have been the portion of a large section of the American Society (be careful of the large S!), since the publication of that remarkable book "The 469 Ultra-Fashionables of America," compiled by Charles Wilbur de Lyon Nichols, on whose shoulders has fallen the mantle of Ward McAllister, inventor of New York's "400." The cream of the cream of American society have now been segregated, corralled, re-concentrated or otherwise abstracted from the common herd and seated on high in the splendor and dazzling radiance of Mr. de Lyon Nichols, august approval. There appears to be, however, a remarkable lack of invention displayed in the New York list of 300 notables. It is confined practically to the guests who were invited to meet the Connaughts and Princess Patricia on their recent visit. Surely New York is going to the dogs when it can only muster a beggarly 300.

Even Ward McAllister, in an earlier and less enlightened period, permitted the metropolis to have a sacred circle of 400. The reason may be that only the supreme ultra-fashionables are included in Beau Nichols' arbitrary selection, and that those unfortunates who are at all tainted with the stigma of slowness, who do not fully subscribe to the modern doctrine of "eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die," are dropped relentlessly. Possibly the compiler's wisdom did not wholly desert him and he hesitated to embark on the stormy waters of the next stratum below, being assured of countenance and support by the precedent already established.

KING PETER IS IN TROUBLE

Is the bloody drama of 1903 about to be repeated in Belgrade? That is a question that all Europe, including Serbian people themselves, are asking. For weeks reports have emanated from Belgrade that a conspiracy has been formed among the officers of the army having for its purpose the dethronement of King Peter, if necessary, by as violent means as those of the terrible night nine years ago, when King Alexander and Queen Draga were murdered in the palace.

King Peter is paying for whatever guilty knowledge he may have had of the regicide plot with uneasy days and sleepless nights. Now in his sixty-eighth year, he is wondering if it was worth while after all, to trade his peace of mind as a private citizen in Switzerland, for the bloody crown of Serbia. Through the palace still stalks the restless ghost of Alexander and the king's ears must still resound the echo of the shrieks of Draga.

At the foreign office and in the war ministry all knowledge of plots and conspiracies are denied, of course. "It is a sensational newspaper lie," said one official, who was most anxious to leave the impression that the best relations existed between Peter and the army and Peter and his people. But talk in the cafes, converse with officers to whom you have been vouchered for or ask any representative of the common Servians, the working people, and one finds little praise for Peter.

"Serbia wants to become a republic," one army officer said. "The army and the people are tired of the dynasty."

RULER OF SMALLEST STATE

By the death of William Alexander, Grand Duke of Luxemburg, which occurred recently, a demure young woman not yet 18 becomes sovereign of that little principality. She is the late ruler's eldest daughter, the Grand Duchess Marie. Luxemburg is a state of 998 square miles in the angle where Germany, France and Belgium meet. It has about 250,000 people. From time immemorial it has been an appanage of the House of Nassau. It was therefore virtually part of Holland, though separated from it until the death of Queen Wilhelmina's father in 1890. Then it followed the male line to the father of the grand duke just dead. In 1907 the succession in the female line was instituted by a family statute.

At a time, some years ago, when it seemed likely that Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, would be childless, she designated this young grand duchess as heir to the throne of the Netherlands and was about to ask the Dutch states general to pass the necessary legislation to this end. Shortly afterward, however, the hopes of the Dutch people for a direct heir to the throne were gratified by the birth of the little Princess Juliana.

The grand duchess is described as an unusually pretty girl, impatient of advice, quick tempered and impulsive—characteristics which greatly displease the royal busy-bodies who are already occupied in selecting for her a suitable husband.

Household Remedy

Taken in the Spring for Years.

Ralph Rust, Willis, Mich., writes: "Hood's Sarsaparilla has been a household remedy in our home as long as I can remember. I have taken it in the spring for several years. It has no equal for cleansing the blood and expelling the humors that accumulate during the winter. Being a farmer and exposed to bad weather, my system is often affected, and I often take Hood's Sarsaparilla with good results. Hood's Sarsaparilla is Peculiar to itself. There is no 'just as good.' Get it today in usual liquid form or tablets called Sarsatabs."

Value of Good Books.

When I consider what some books have done for the world, and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe pain, give an ideal life to those whose hours are cold and hard, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truth from heaven, I give eternal blessings for this gift, and thank God for books.—James Free van Clarke.

Disconcerted by Sneezes.

The world has now well-nigh forgotten M. Vivier, the once famous French-horn player, who was so unnerved by the late Lord Houghton's blowing his nose at a critical moment of his performance that he threw up all his London engagements. "Ah," he would say after this, "the English have terrible noses. They remind you of the day of judgment."

New Zealand has over 2,700 miles of railway. Electrification of certain sections is now under contemplation.

Searches for Buried Treasure.

A countess who lives near Rome is carrying on a search for buried treasure. She found in her library an old manuscript, wherein was told of a treasure buried in her land, and directions given for the excavations. A Spiritualist is said to have informed the countess that the words of the manuscript are true.

Reason for His Belief.

A noted German astronomer is of the firm belief that Mars is inhabited. He recently explained his belief by remarking that if there were 10,000,000 houses all fitted alike in the world and one was known to be inhabited it would be a logical inference to suppose that all were.

Milton Foresaw America?

Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks; methinks I see her as an eagle mewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full midday beam.—John Milton.

RATIONS FOR A LAYING HEN

Experiments in West Virginia Show Fowls Given Nitrogen Feed Increased Most.

The use of a carbonaceous and a nitrogenous ration for laying hens has been studied by the experts of the West Virginia experiment station. The result of two years' experiments has shown that fowls fed with a nitrogenous ration increased in weight more than ten times as much as those fed the carbonaceous ration, which consisted largely of corn. They laid nearly twice as many eggs and gave about four times as much profit, although the cost of food consumed was slightly more.

It was also found that eggs hatched from six to twelve hours earlier, that the chicks were stronger and more vigorous, also the fertility of eggs was much greater than corn-fed hens. Another important effect was that the eggs from the corn-fed hens were smaller, but the shells were darker colored, particularly of Light Brahmas.

These facts are well worth knowing. As a rule the majority of farmers feed their poultry mostly on corn throughout the year, which is an expensive feed. Where fowls are kept on an exclusive corn diet the year round the production of eggs can nearly always be increased by the judicious use of some "egg food."

PROPER CARE OF THE DUCKS

There is no danger of disease among ducks if the quarters are cleaned every day and good water is kept within reach of all. A pan or small trough used for watering should be deep enough for the ducks to dip their bills into above the nostrils, otherwise their nostrils get clogged and the ducks suffer. This is all the water they need if they are market birds.

Do not allow market ducks to swim. This will keep them from growing rapidly and retards fattening. It also tends to make the meat less tender. But give all the breeders a swimming place, preferably running water, which will not "puddle" and make the ducks "mudders." Ducks are never troubled with lice, unless housed with chickens or turkeys. They will not thrive if housed with poultry, not even with geese. And try to provide roomy quarters. For ducks need much exercise. They are great wanderers. They lose weight if confined in one place.

Fly Thrives in Alfalfa.

A professor of the Washington state experiment station has discovered that the common house fly multiplies and thrives in the alfalfa fields. This discovery has caused a great deal of interest in the west and investigations by scientists are now being made to ascertain just how the fly breeds in alfalfa and how the pest may be overcome.

Birds' Nests as Food.

Millions of birds' nests are found off the islands of the coast of Siam and are in great demand by the Chinese as food. The prices range as high as $15 or even $20 per pound. The nests consist almost entirely of the salivary secretions of these birds and are used for making soup.

Four Crops for Bees.

In some parts of England farmers convey their bee hives to the heathers in order that the bees may gather the honey from the bloom. In that country there are four crops for bees. Fruit blossoms in the spring, clover a month later, lime trees in July and the heather in September.

Champion Laying Hen.

New York City Milk Supply.

In New York city the milk supply is under strict municipal surveillance, and it is said upon excellent authority that the common milk sold there is "equal to the certified milk of Chicago, which sells for 20 cents a quart."

Avoiding Scab in Potatoes.

By treating seed potatoes and not planting in land in which scabby potatoes were grown, it is a notorious fact that a clean vegetable may be grown. Clean land and clean seed means a clean product.

Prevent Bitter Rot.

The Roman stem apple is very easily affected with bitter rot, but this may be prevented by spraying with Bordeaux mixture or lime-sulphur solution before the apples are full grown.

Right Mating.

The right mating now is like buds that gradually unfold in the spring time and ripen into richness of fruits the coming fall.

Green Feed Helps.

Make-Up of Tankage.

TRICKS PLAYED BY DYNAMITE

"It is generally supposed that when a charge of dynamite has exploded it is all over—that the entire charge has been consumed," said a "hard rock" man who has worked in mines, in river tunnels and other places where high explosives are used. "This supposition, however, is not correct," he continued. "Sometimes particles of dynamite will be blown out with the broken rock. Then it becomes a menace to the workmen. It is a favorite practice of men who are waiting or resting to sit on a pile of muck, as the broken rock is called, and to jab into it with a pick or a sandstick or some other steel thing, much the same as a Yankee will while he talks or thinks. If the steel strikes one of these bits of dynamite that has not gone off, because the glycerine in it has started to run or because a fragment of it has been crystallized, there will be an explosion. The chances are that not one out of the group of men sitting around will escape injury."

"Another frequent cause of accidents is that sometimes when the dynamite explodes and tears out the rock a small quantity of it will be left in the bottom of the drill hole, unaffected by the shock. If the drill hole that remains happens to be pointed in the right direction a lazy drill runner is likely to take advantage of it and start his new hole in the old one in order to make a record or save time. The instant his drill commences to thud on the unexploded dynamite it goes off. The steel is driven back through the barrel of the machine, wrecking it and usually killing the drill runner. This explains many mysterious deaths that have been attributed to 'missed shots.' These accidents are more frequent in New York, where more dynamite is used in building operations than anywhere else in the United States, because the men who handle the explosives there are not so well acquainted with its peculiarities as they are in the mining camps."

Are Learning Right Ways.

An English lady, long resident in Tokyo, once wrote to a friend that the impulse of her Japanese maids is always to sew on cuffs frills and other similar things topsy turvy and inside out. Since the publication of such reports the art of needlework has been greatly improved in Japan. Several of the English methods have been taught with great success, if only to judge by the lovely drawn thread work sold in great quantities in Great Britain.

Unable to Count Beyond Four.

A close observer has definitely established the fact that magpies and rooks cannot count further than four. A rook never returns to its nest until it is quite satisfied that there is no danger near. When four hunters or near-by log cabin, the rook would return to its nest after the last had gone out of sight. But whenever there were more the bird lost count and returned to its nest even while some were still in the hut.

Music Makes for Refinement.

Music is a noble art; one which uplifts the sentiments and elevates the mind. There are phases of it which are calculated to amuse and entertain, as there are in the other arts. But the main tendency is for the better. It touches deep emotions and refines delicate shades of feeling. The person who loves good music is usually of a superior nature. Shakespeare has put it somewhat strongly when he says: "The man that hath no music in himself, nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds, is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils." So the cultivation of good taste is as much of a necessity on the part of the teacher as is the cultivation of the fingers. That this is being realized by the majority of our best musicians is proved by the great advance made in the pieces now taught over those taught twenty-five or thirty years ago.

Victory to Cheerful Spirit.

To face life brightly as may be, to learn to laugh at minor troubles, to cultivate a sense of humor, all these mean fewer wrinkles and a longer youth. The Budget knows well one gallant woman upon whom trouble after trouble has been heaped, and who yet is beautiful at an age when many have laid aside every thought of trying to be otherwise than "decently covered," and who is fighting the battle of life, while her contemporaries are knitting by a fireside.—New York Tribune.

Ancient Vaults Exposed.

During heavy rains in Kildare county, Ireland, a portion of the walls of historic Kildare abbey, Castleter mot, became undermined and fell when it was discovered that underneath were vaults in which were skulls and human remains. It is calculated that these remains have been there for the last eight centuries, since the time the abbey was a monastery.

Grandfather Holds the Record.

There has been much progress, of course, but still we doubt if the young man who licks up the ground with a six-cylinder snorter thinks any more of himself than did his sturdy grandfather who could make four yokes of oxen perform in front of a big load of freight out of old Jefferson.—Galveston News.

It Looks Easy.

There were a couple of men on the far who were abusing the rich in a general way, when the man in the corner spoke up and said:

"It's entirely your fault that you are not rich men yourselves. If others have taken advantage of the opportunities you have neglected they are not to be blamed."

"Where in blazes have been our opportunities?" demanded one of the pair.

"Have you dug a hole in the ground and advertised it as an oil well?"

"No."

"You might have made a million apiece out of it. Ever wash a bar of brass over and sell it for a gold brick?"

"Of course not!"

"Ten thousand dollars a year are made at it, and you run no risk whatever. It's a profession that is looked up to these days. How about the green goods business?"

"Do you mean to insult us, sir?"

"Not at all. I'm simply showing you how to get rich. Ever go into a merger?"

"No, sir."

"Simplest thing in the world. You merge with the other feller and he has nothing and you have it all after a bit. An industrious man can lay the foundation of a fortune by highway robbery, and if you divvy with a politician you are safer than winning at poker in a mixed crowd. Gentlemen, all around you are golden opportunities awaiting you, and—"

But they had to leave the car at that corner, and the rich man had no more to say.

Helpful Hint.

A good way to avoid getting the fingers inky, if one has a tendency that way, is to save the fingers of discarded kid gloves and keep them in the writing desk, slipping one over the middle finger and another, if necessary, over the forefinger, when sitting down to write. This often saves time and annoyance when a note has to be written just before going out.

Gigantic Loaves of Bread.

The biggest loaves of bread baked to be eaten are those made in France or Italy. In the case of the pipe bread of the latter country, the loaves are between two and three feet in length, and occasionally even longer; while the French people make their loaves in the shape of very long rolls of bread ranging from four to five feet, and in a few instances over six feet in length.

Telling the Banana.

A banana is a hard thing for the greenhorn to buy right. One way to tell is by the tip end. If it is sweet the tip is small and comes to a sharp point. If there is an abundance of thick, tough skin, full of leathery fiber, something is wrong with the banana; maybe it has too much plantain in it. Avoid the banana with the tip all spread out with too much knobby skin at the end.—New York Press.

Two Pleasant Experiences.

It appearing to the undersigned, Judge of said Court, by the petition filed and presented and filed by William H. Isaacs, administrator of the estate of Annie M. Don't forget to vote, Tuesday, May 14.

Gilroy will irrigate. At the election Monday that city voted to continue in the "wet goods" business for another year, by a majority of 68 votes. They claim to be building bridges with booze money.

Santa Clara county at present has better roads than many counties in the state. With a comprehensive system of improved highways, uninterruptedly maintained, this county will earn the reputation of having the best roads in the state of California.—Times.

Now is the time to "swat that fly." The following advice is good. Screen your doors and windows. Cover the dishes and keep them covered. Put your garbage into cans and keep the cans tightly closed. To prevent flies from breeding allow no filth or dirt to accumulate around the house, the stable or the barnyard. Pour kerosene oil into drains and kill the eggs of the fly.—Gilroy Gazette.

Californians, according to statistics, have the motor habit. The registrations at Secretary of State Jordan's office show Californians have purchased on an average 107 automobiles per day during the past month. During April 2803 cars were sold in the state. The fees for the registration of the machines amounted to more than $6000. With such ideal autoing weather and roads, is it any wonder that enthusiasts buy machines and tourists come from all parts of the continent to enjoy outdoor life.

The citizens of the Santa Clara Valley were given an opportunity to hear one of the most popular men in this country at San Jose, Tuesday evening, when Senator Robert M. LaFollette spoke in the interest of his candidacy. He is a powerful and convincing speaker and his personality and arguments made a telling effect on his 5,000 interested listeners. There is not a man but admires the "little giant" for his honesty of purpose and untiring energy in the interests of the common people and against the special privilege. His address dealt entirely with the issues of the campaign, and delivered some telling blows to both the Taft and Roosevelt factions, citing instances where both men had failed in their performance of acts beneficial to the common people.

For Shame, San Jose! One of the greatest breaches of courtesy ever committed by a city or its officers was done Tuesday night in San Jose. No booster of that town can point with pride to the reception accorded Senator Robert M. LaFollette. Hundreds of visitors from other parts of the county are scoring various prominent men of the city who should have had civic pride enough to have seen to it that so prominent a man was given a fitting welcome. Where was the Mayor? Where was the Commercial Club? Where was any club or committee to introduce this national man? Nobody seemed to know about "who was who" or where. It looked like a put-up job. Mr. LaFollette was introduced by his manager, Mr. Hauser and tho somewhat tired, gave a very good talk on the issues of the day. After the address Mr. LaFollette left for San Francisco.

With approximately 40,000 citizens qualified to vote at the Presidential Preference Primary election on May 14, Santa Clara county has 28,577 Republicans and 7,522 Democrats. Approximately 4,000 are Prohibitionists, Socialists and citizens who have declined to state their party affiliations.

These figures were compiled by County Clerk H. A. Pfister and show that the total number of those entitled to vote May 14 is 36,101. The Republicans of the Forty-fourth Assembly District number 14,493 and of the Forty-fifth District 14,084, making a total in the county of 28,577. The Democrats of the 44th number 4,133, of the 45th 3,389, total 7,522. The total number of voters entitled to express their preference in the 44th District is 18,628 and in the 45th is 17,473.

Mother's Day

Sunday, May 12th, will be the fifth celebration of Mother's Day, one of the three international holidays.

The observance of the day was begun by Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, who five years ago sent a notice to a church paper asking the second Sunday in May be observed as "Mother's Day" and requesting every son and daughter, who wished to honor motherhood to wear a white carnation on that day.

The rapidity with which the observance of this day has spread is remarkable in view of the fact that there has been no organized effort along that line, but the whole world has eagerly seized the chance to do honor to motherhood.

The wearing of a white carnation, or any white flower, or Mother's favorite flower, whatever it may be, is the outward evidence of your observance of the day. If you are privileged to be with your mother on that day, make it her day far as possible; if absent, arrange to have a letter reach her at that time; or if she has passed beyond, perform some act of kindness toward "somebody's mother." The Congregational church will have special services on that day.

"Good motherhood is the basis of all our prosperity."

Live this day as your mother would have you live it.

If your mother be living, make it a day of pleasure for her, in loving reunion if possible, one day for the many she gave you; or, send her a line of greeting warmer than usual. Wear for her the white flowers of love and fidelity.

Remembering her sacrifices—"the best mother that ever lived,"—make some yourself for others this day. Mothers' "Memory Flower"—White Carnation.

Quantities of Borax

The borax deposits of the United States are of great extent and there seems to be little danger of their exhaustion. In 1910 we produced, according to the U. S. Geological Survey, 42,357 tons of crude borax, valued at $1,201,842, while the value of the imports amounted to only $12,397—approximately 1 per cent of the domestic production.

Stroke Fatal

Anna, wife of Albert Primley, passed away at the family home, Tuesday, after suffering from a stroke of paralysis which occurred last Friday. Before this time she was in apparent good health, and her death was a great shock to her many Lodi friends.

Mrs. Primley was a native of Kentucky and was formerly a resident of Campbell. She was 56 years of age and leaves no children.

Rev. Winning conducted the funeral services and interment was made in the Lodi cemetery.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 1 to 3 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.
